Allen W. Dulles, director of the Nation's Central Intelligence Agency, will speak at Mercer University's eighth annual Law Day ceremonies on Friday, Oct. 28.

The Macon Council on World Affairs is joining the Walter F. George School of Law in sponsoring Dulles' appearance.

Mr. Dulles' address will be part of all-day ceremonies which will bring hundreds of lawyers from throughout Georgia to the Mercer campus, Dean F. Hodge O'Neal of the Law School said. Other features of the Law Day program will be announced in the near future.

The brother of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, and a lawyer in private life, Allen Dulles, has filled assignments ferreting out information on this country's enemies and their plans since World War I.

He has been decorated with the Medal for Merit, Medal for Freedom, Order of S. S. Maurizio Lazzaro (Italy), Officer of the Legion of Honor, and Belgium Cross of Officer of Leopold.

During World War II, Dulles was in the Office of Strategic Service working with William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan, director of the OSS.

After organizing the OSS office in New York, Dulles went to Switzerland and directed a network of agents within Germany. While there he was responsible for negotiating the surrender of German troops in Italy, and he later headed the OSS mission in Germany.

In 1948, Dulles was named by President Harry Truman to serve as chairman of a three-man group to survey the U. S. intelligence system.

He was one of the planners of the Central Intelligence Agency, joined that agency in 1951, became deputy director under General Walter Bedell Smith, and was designated by President Eisenhower as director of Central Intelligence in January, 1953.

A native of Watertown, N. Y., Dulles holds his master's degree from Princeton and received his law degree from George Washington University. He holds honorary doctorates of law from Brown University, Temple University and New York University.

After graduating from Princeton in 1914 he taught a year in Allahabad, India, and entered the U. S. Diplomatic Service in 1916. He was assigned to Vienna, Austria, then to Berne, Switzerland, and was a member of the American Commission to negotiate peace at the Paris Peace Conference, 1918-1919.

He was appointed first secretary of the American Embassy in Berlin in 1919, served with the American Commission in Constantinople, Turkey, from 1920-22 and was chief of the State Department's Division of Near Eastern Affairs from 1922-1926.

He served as legal advisor to the American delegation at both the Three-Power Naval Conference in Geneva in 1927, and the General Disarmament Conference in Geneva in 1932 and 1933.

Dulles is the author of several books, the best known of which is "Germany's Underground," published in 1947. He is married to the former Clover Todd of New York, and they have two daughters and a son. The family lives in Washington, D. C.
